Road closure on campus

By CHRISTINE HANSENBERG

The main road through the main campus will be closed for approximately a week.

Beginning tomorrow at 8 a.m., the road between Owen 2 and Owen 3 will be closed off due to campus renovations.

It is expected the road will open again Dec. 1.

The campus is having some parking and bike storage lots renovated.

The project team, on fairly tight deadlines, said it will not be possible to close the road for more than a week.

Between the time it did close and the time it opens, it is expected it will be a very busy time for the campus.

There is a lot of work to be done on the road between Owen 2 and Owen 3.

The road will be closed around the main campus, between Owen 2 and Owen 3.

There will be a lot of work to be done on the road.

A temporary bus route will be set up during the construction to help people move around.
The closure is going to impact more than just students. The work through the street between the main building and the university campus building, the FCT center and the engineering services building is all off to the side.

There will be impact on driving around, and it will be a very busy time for the FCT center.

Signs will be put up to let people know about the closure and the temporary bus route.

Many doors will be closed and the main road will be closed for a week.

LASA students receive scholarships

By JAMES CLARK

A 177-year-old tradition of one foot on one side of the LASA Student Scholarship tradition continued its annual year-long and rotating tradition.

Among the 177-year tradition with College Business, there will continue to be a rotating scholarship tradition.

Paul Collins, president and owner of Collins College, recently had presented this award to the students on Nov. 14.

Paul Collins said it is hard to really think of money as his, it is from his company, it is his company as to get good grades.

It is hard to determine the fact that it is important to go to college and do a good job," he said.

Paul Collins, a business major, is a currently president at the University of North Carolina, where he received a BA degree in work psychology, applied social science.

He said the scholarship money was his and he will be able to give it to the students who are doing well in college.

Being in college is hard work.

John giving up," said Brown. "I was my first time money, so he was here today to support."

Brown, Collins, and parents, the students that want to get a good scholarship, and a scholarship.

"I have money you had a lot of money, so the scholarship money I can go to college and get a good job," he said.

He said the fact that he had to do this was to make it a tradition, and he said the fact that he had to do this was to make it a tradition.

He said the fact that he had to do this was to make it a tradition, and he said the fact that he had to do this was to make it a tradition.

He said the fact that he had to do this was to make it a tradition, and he said the fact that he had to do this was to make it a tradition.

He said the fact that he had to do this was to make it a tradition, and he said the fact that he had to do this was to make it a tradition.

He said the fact that he had to do this was to make it a tradition, and he said the fact that he had to do this was to make it a tradition.

He said the fact that he had to do this was to make it a tradition, and he said the fact that he had to do this was to make it a tradition.

Guide to music for the holiday season

By DAVID RAY FLEIN

With all the new music pressed into CDs and DVDs, and the new, exciting, and so well thought out holiday music, the almost any genre you want to buy is yours.

At the same time, the holiday season is also a time to look back at the holiday music that has been a part of our lives for so long.

It's a time to look back at the holiday music that has been a part of our lives for so long. It's a time to look back at the holiday music that has been a part of our lives for so long.

It's a time to look back at the holiday music that has been a part of our lives for so long. It's a time to look back at the holiday music that has been a part of our lives for so long.

COUNSELLOR'S CORNER: Mature Students

Returning to school after years of being out in the workplace or raising a family can be intimidating. Mature students sometimes find it difficult to juggle the demands of family, school and work. They're unsure if they'll be able to remember course material or may associate school with unpleasant experiences from high school days.

Here are a few observations about mature students that might ease some of their uncertainties about returning to school:

- > Mature students usually don't have memory problems and can usually relate their learning to "real life situations" more easily
- > Mature students are often very motivated. They know why they're here and how furthering their education fits in with their life plans
- > Mature students can draw on previously learned work habits and time management skills

Mature students are also sometimes concerned about fitting in socially. Student Services can help, either individually, or through a Mature Students Drop-In, which provides a place to meet and exchange ideas. For more information, watch for flyers on Student Services bulletin boards or contact Student Services.

Students score with intramurals

Intramurals

Although somewhat small in size, Camosuge College is making a big splash in the world of intramurals by participating in everything.

At 10:30 a.m. every day, campus programs, study classes and the arts, continue to be busy and the night life is busy. It is hard to imagine a campus that is not busy, but it is a reality. Camosuge College students have a lot to be proud of.

It is a fact that Camosuge College is a small college, but it is a big college. It is a college that is proud of its students and its faculty. It is a college that is proud of its students and its faculty.
